complement our flaws. St. John Baptist de La Salle went through a lot of struggles when starting his first school in France, but he continued to have faith in God. I believe that a big part of being Lasallian is having faith, and trusting God. La Salle did not know that he was going to go into education, but eventually he found out that it was his call.

To conclude, being Lasallian not only means to live out the five core principles but to have faith and trust in God as well!
